PRACTICE EXPERIENCE

Aliyah Lewis is a skilled transactional attorney with significant experience handling commercial real estate matters. Specializing in transactions, leasing, and development, she has represented a diverse clientele, including property developers, investors, and corporate tenants. Aliyah possesses a comprehensive understanding of real estate regulations and market trends, leading to her success in client representation. In addition to her real estate experience, she has regulatory and compliance expertise where she guided credit unions and financial institutions through compliance frameworks. Her expertise extends across regulatory landscapes, ensuring that businesses operate within legal parameters while minimizing risk. With a commitment to excellence, Aliyah combines legal acumen with a strategic approach, making her a trusted advisor whether navigating the intricacies of real estate transactions or regulatory compliance. Her proactive approach and attention to detail have proven invaluable in crafting effective legal strategies, earning her a reputation for providing sound counsel to business clients and corporations.

Prior to starting her legal career, Aliyah attended Waseda University in Japan, where she studied Japanese and international law concepts, applying the knowledge and experience abroad to her time at the University of Alabama School of Law. While in law school, Aliyah founded a registered student organization for first-year law students, which was later incorporated into the Diversity and Inclusion department upon her graduation.

In her downtime, Aliyah enjoys adding stamps to her passport and trying multicultural cuisine.
